

Agnisys announces 'Mystic Tool' at DVCon 2014

Lowell, MA. Feb 28th, 2014 -- Agnisys Inc. today announced that it is all set to introduce a new tool code named the 'Mystic Tool' for the Design & Verification engineers at DVCon 2014. Visitors can get a sneak peek of this brand new technology at the Agnisys booth #302. "Our Engineering team has been exuding with a lot of energy because of the development of this new ground breaking technology that will ease the pain of code development and debug for the DV engineers. So if you want to accelerate your current UVM based development process, check out our booth", said Anupam Bakshi, CEO, Agnisys, Inc.

What's mysticism got to do with technology? According to Anupam "The technology behind this product is such that it appears that the tool reads the user's mind – hence the 'Mystic' nature of the tool".

Agnisys claims that the 'Mystic tool' will completely change, accelerate, and transform the way engineers create and debug DV code. Although, the detailed functionality has not been disclosed to the press, it will be shown to the visitors and their feedback will be solicited. Visitors will be able to take a sneak peek at the tool at the Agnisys booth and also subscribe for Beta and launch announcements.

"The tool is slated to be launched at DAC 2014 and we are currently giving an opportunity to early adopters to give their feedback and steer the direction of development and even give it a formal name. The winner of the Naming contest will get a LIFETIME* subscription of the tool along with other prizes", said Anupam.
